A copy of the original edition was discovered in Lord Charlemont's collection by J. O. Halliwell-Phillips and reprinted by him in 1865 in a private edition of 25 copies, of which 13 were afterwards destroyed by him. The present reprint is from the copy of the original edition now in the Huth library.
Concerning the identity of the author, the editor remarks that "of his origin and kindred nothing is known, and nothing can be said". (Preface, p. v) The ascription to him of the Christian name of Richard (Dict. nat. biog.) seems unsustained.

Richmond. Union theological seminary.
Originated in classes in theology, conducted by Moses Hoge, president of Hampden-Sidney college in Prince Edward county, Va.; officially recognized 1873 as School of theology of the Synod of Virginia of the Presbyterian church; in 1892 the synod transferred the seminary to the Presbytery of Hanover; in 1897 the synods of Virginia and North Carolina took the place of Hanover presbytery in governing the seminary; and in consequence this corporate title, by which it was changed to Union theological seminary. In 1898 the seminary was moved to Richmond. It is now under the control of the synods of Virginia, North Carolina, West Virginia, and Appalachia of the Presbyterian church in the United States.
